

Sinclair Broadcasting has decided to force their stations to air a very partisan so-called documentary smearing Senator John Kerry just day before the election. This proves that media consolidation is dangerous.

Since they are using the public airwaves without charge they are obligated to serve the public interest. When large corporations control these airwaves the public is served what is best for the corporations.

Sinclair is a prime example why media ownership rules need to be strengthened, not weakened.
Thank you.